For small woodland landowners: There were a couple questions last night about where folks with less than ten acres should go for resources. Service foresters often aren't able to go to smaller acreage just because of time/resource constraints, but Holden is working on getting some resources for this important group of landowners. A Small-Woodland Management Guide is being developed and due to be published this summer. If you'd like to be on the list to receive this resource, please email jmiller@holdenfg.org.
